

CHEMISTRY & INDUSTRY

NUMBER 21, PAGES 847-890

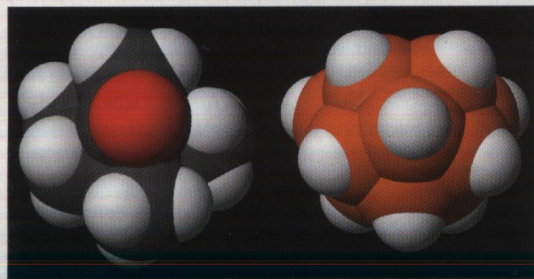

3 NOVEMBER 1997

US branded 'dinosaur'
over climate change
plan, p854

Do chillies hold the key to pain? p851

How does the nose distinguish molecules? p866

848 LETTERS

849 NEWS

- ◆ India upgrades drug discovery labs
- ◆ Forensic science turns to glowing organics
- ◆ Shell announces renewable energy programme
- ◆ US biotech firms 'must merge'

856 CHEMISTRY PRIZE

Nobel dividend for well-funded Walker

First Harry Kroto, now John Walker. Britain has its second chemistry Nobellist in as many years. Graham Lawton finds out how he's feeling.

860 PATENTS

861 MEDICINAL CHEMISTRY

Towards the next generation of drugs and vaccines for tuberculosis

Despite the availability of effective therapies, the spectre of tuberculosis is once more raising its head and new treatments are urgently needed as Ken Duncan at Glaxo Wellcome explains.

866 ANALYTICAL CHEMISTRY

The nose as spectroscopist

Smell is big business — but how does it work? Luca Turin at University College London tries to sniff out the secret behind our noses.

871 REVIEWS

876 HIGHLIGHTS

889 PERKIN

890 COMMENT

CHEMISTRY & INDUSTRY

NUMBER 21, PAGES 847-890

3 NOVEMBER 1997

المركز الجامعي والبلدي
المكتبة الجامعية

