

Social Justice and the City

David Harvey

© David Harvey 1973
First published 1973 by
Edward Arnold (Publishers) Ltd
25 Hill Street, London W1X 8LL

ISBN 0 7131 5687 2 ✓

All Rights Reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise, without the prior permission of Edward Arnold (Publishers) Ltd.

Contents

Introduction	9
--------------	---

PART ONE LIBERAL FORMULATIONS

Chapter one: Social processes and spatial form: (1) the conceptual problems of urban planning	22
The geographical versus the sociological imagination	23
Towards a philosophy of social space	27
Some methodological problems at the interface	37
1 Individuation	38
2 Confounding	40
3 Statistical inference	41
Strategy at the interface	44
Chapter two: Social processes and spatial form: (2) The redistribution of real income in an urban system	50
The distribution of income and the social objectives for a city system	52
Some features governing the redistribution of income	55
1 The speed of change and the rate of adjustment in an urban system	55
2 The price of accessibility and the cost of proximity	56
3 Externality effects	57
The redistributive effects of the changing location of jobs and housing	60
Redistribution and the changing value of property rights	64
The availability and price of resources	68
Political processes and the redistribution of real income	73
Social values and the cultural dynamics of the urban system	79
Spatial organization and political, social and economic processes	86
1 The provision and control of impure public goods in an urban system	87
2 Regional and territorial organization in an urban system	91
A concluding comment	94

Chapter three: Social justice and spatial systems	96
"A just distribution"	99
Territorial distributive justice	101
1 Need	101
2 Contribution to common good	105
3 Merit	106
To achieve a distribution justly	108
A just distribution justly achieved: territorial social justice	116

PART TWO SOCIALIST FORMULATIONS

Chapter four: Revolutionary and counter-revolutionary theory in geography and the problem of ghetto formation	120
A further comment on revolutionary and counter-revolutionary theories	147
Chapter five: Use value, exchange value and the theory of urban land use	153
The use value and exchange value of land and improvements	157
Urban land-use theory	160
Micro-economic urban land-use theory	162
Rent and the allocation of urban land to uses	176
Use value, exchange value, the concept of rent and theories of urban land use—a conclusion	190
Chapter six: Urbanism and the city—an interpretive essay	195
Modes of production and modes of economic integration	196
Modes of production	197
Modes of economic integration	206
1 Reciprocity	207
2 Redistributive integration	209
3 Market exchange	210
Cities and surplus	216
The surplus concept and urban origins	216
Surplus value and the surplus concept	224
Surplus labour, surplus value and the nature of urbanism	229
Urbanism and the spatial circulation of surplus value	237
Conclusions	238

Modes of economic integration and the space economy of urbanism	240
Variation within a mode of economic integration	241
The circulation of the surplus and the balance of influence between the modes of economic integration in the urban space economy	245
1 Patterns in the geographic circulation of the surplus	246
2 The cities of medieval Europe	250
3 The market exchange process and metropolitan urbanism in the contemporary capitalist world	261
4 Redistribution and reciprocity as countervailing forces to market exchange in the contemporary metropolis	274

PART THREE   SYNTHESIS

Chapter seven: Conclusions and reflections	286
On methods and theories	286
1 Ontology	288
2 Epistemology	296
On the nature of urbanism	302
Bibliography	315
Index of authors	327
Index of subjects	330